Simple user interface Color picker and generator Color generator For most people, acquiring a desired color is a simple task. However, it is not so easy to extract it from the spectrum of existing colors. The main idea of Colorism is to help you find the exact color you like, directly at the tip of the cursor, easily and quickly. Colorism supports two actions. The first one is the color generator, which allows you to modify a color, by varying the red, green or blue values on the final palette. The second function is the color picker, which uses the hue retriever and allows you to obtain the exact color that lies at the tip of the cursor. Additionally, you can save the color in a.jpg image file, for later reference. The application can be both used online, in a web browser, without installing anything on your computer, or offline, on your desktop. The use of an online mode allows you to use the color generator without being connected, while you could only acquire colors from the online color picker, if the tool is online. Colorism is a software that allows you to obtain any desired color, quickly, easily and without troubles. You will only need to generate a palett and to select a color from it, once you are online. Once the application detects the current color, it returns its RGB and Hex values to the interface. This way, you can easily use it in different kinds of applications without having to install the software, or even to install any special plugin to access it.Relationships with the self and others. In this paper, I will attempt to make some sense of the feelings and emotions of such patients. I will argue that their difficulty is to know and recognize themselves in the face of intense pressures of self and other. For the ego there is a need for a foundational certainty, which it cannot experience. I will review some of the relevant literature and give examples from clinical material. Finally, I will present some of my own clinical experience and propose a treatment approach./**********
